I hope you were able to rest at least a little over the holidays.

(b)(3) & (b)(5)

I assume it is ok to bring Phil Agrees in on this, despite him not being on the ITAC. I'll need his help.

We would certainly welcome a meeting to discuss this.

Thank you,

Hopefully a lot of this is "off-the-shelf", but if we could ask for this input by end of next week, the sooner the better really, that would be of great value to us. Maybe even a matrix summarizing the key issues.

(b)(3) (b)(5)

The sky is pretty wide open, and we have of course our model, but your assistance and creative thinking on this in the next week or so would be great as we consider our options and approaches going forward.

USTR friends,

I just want to follow-up to reiterate the medical technology industry's on-going and strong support for the TPP negotiations and our preference for a KORUS -type sectoral. Of course, if we can be helpful in regulatory coherence – and, Phil Agress has been participating in those meetings – we will try our best. I'm attaching for your reference our proposal.

In addition, if you would like me to reach out to medical technology associations in TPP countries, which I have done in the past, please let me know. Australia and New Zealand have excellent associations.

Thank you for all of your hard work.

Have a great Thanksgiving!

U.S. unhappy with Japan's delayed decision on free trade talks

TOKYO — The U.S. government voiced strong discontent last month with Japan's postponement of a plan to decide by June on whether to join negotiations for a U.S.-led Pacific free trade accord in the wake of the March 11 catastrophe, sources close to the bilateral relations said Monday.
The discontent was conveyed to the Japanese government through diplomatic channels, the sources said.

In a policy guideline adopted May 17, the Japanese government said it would "comprehensively consider when to make a decision" on whether to join the talks on the Trans-Pacific Partnership, a regional free trade initiative being negotiated by the United States, Australia and seven other Asia-Pacific countries.

Before the magnitude 9.0 earthquake and tsunami devastated Japan's northeastern region and crippled the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant, the government said it would decide by around June whether to join the talks. The TPP is intended to require member economies in principle to scrap all tariffs.

The government also decided to put off a plan to work out in June a basic stance on reform of the nation's agricultural sector which is staging the main opposition to the TPP, fearing that it would be hit hard by an influx of cheap agricultural imports.

A senior White House official voiced strong discontent with the delay in Japan's decision on TPP negotiations at a time when Tokyo is moving ahead in talks on free trade agreements with the European Union as well as China and South Korea, the sources said.

Another U.S. government official concerned said the postponement had made it difficult for Japan to join the first group of nine economies leading negotiations for the TPP accord, they added.

Against the backdrop of these developments, Prime Minister Naoto Kan said Japan would make a decision in the near future on whether to participate in TPP talks when he met with U.S. President Barack Obama on the sidelines of the summit of leaders from the Group of Eight economies in France in late May.

The United States hopes that the nine negotiating partners, which also include Chile, Brunei, Malaysia, New Zealand, Peru, Singapore and Vietnam, will reach a broad agreement on the TPP before the summit of the 21-member Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum in Honolulu in November.

Stan,

See below for the 2 sources I looked at on this; you'll see that RTT News uses "relax", but this may not be accurate in view of the other report. I just wanted to bring this to your attention because I wouldn't be surprised if there are some who would like to see a more "relaxed" IP requirement, whatever that means.

SIEM REAP, Cambodia: Sixteen nations home to roughly half the world's population have agreed "in principle" to create a free trade area spanning Asia, the secretary-general of ASEAN said on Friday.

Trade ministers from the 10-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and their counterparts from China, Japan, South Korea, India, Australia and New Zealand will press their leaders to start talks on the trade zone at a regional summit in November, Surin Pitsuwan told AFP.

The move towards establishing the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP), made during a meeting in the Cambodian tourist town of Siem Reap on Thursday, was hailed by Surin as "a big achievement".

The proposal could transform the region - containing around 3.5 billion people - into an integrated market with a combined Gross Domestic Product (GDP) of $23 trillion, a third of the world's current annual GDP, he said.

ASEAN - which groups Brunei, Cambodia, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Myanmar, the Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and Vietnam - already has five separate free trade agreements (FTAs) governing economic cooperation with the six partner countries.

"This idea of trying to string together all these FTAs in existence into one, in principle now it's been agreed," Surin said on the final day of a week-long gathering of ASEAN economic ministers.

The pact will aim to eliminate trade barriers, create a liberal investment environment and protect intellectual property rights, according to the negotiation guidelines.

"This is a bold move to deepen integration in the most dynamic region in the world," New Zealand Trade Minister Tim Groser said in a statement on his government's website.

"It shows that despite the economic difficulties in other parts of the world, Asia is actively pursuing trade liberalisation."

Progress on the proposed RCEP trade deal, where China will be a dominant power, comes as the United States is leading a push to create a vast trans-Pacific pact with at least 10 other economies, including four ASEAN members.

The Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) has emerged as a trade priority for US President Barack Obama, who has cast the mooted pact as a way to boost US exports and jobs while preserving labor and environmental standards.

US Trade Representative Ron Kirk, who attended this week's trade talks in Cambodia, said there was room for both trade initiatives.

"We see them as complementary, not necessarily competition," he told reporters.

ASEAN Plus Six To Set Up Free Trade Zone In 2015

RTT News (United States)
NoticiasFinancieras

(RTTNews) - A meeting of officials of Asia-Pacific economies agreed on Thursday to try to conclude a pact in 2015 to set up a free trade zone.

The ten ASEAN member nations and six other countries -- Japan, China, South Korea, India, Australia and New Zealand -- made the agreement at a meeting in Siem Reap, Cambodia, Japanese media reports said.

They said they would try to lower or abolish tariffs on a range of products while giving special consideration to farm produce and other sensitive items.

They also agreed to try to liberalize trade in services and investment, and relax rules on protecting intellectual property.

The regional grouping says that their goals will be more ambitious than those of their existing free trade agreements. The countries are to take a final decision at a summit in November in Phnom Penh after further discussion in working-level consultations. Talks on launching the free trade zone are scheduled to start early next year, the report added.

Hi Jean,

It was great to see you and Sue yesterday. We found the discussion to be very productive, and look forward to staying in close touch with you on China issues going forward.

As promised, I am introducing you via email to Probir Mehta, who is the lead U.S. IPR negotiator in the TPP negotiations. We would be interested in chatting with you about this topic as well. Would you and/or Sue be free for a call sometime tomorrow, or alternatively, next Thursday? (Unfortunately, the rest of next week is fairly booked, given travel schedules). If neither of those dates work, we could also look at possible dates later in August.

Happy 4th! Thanks for yesterday's call. If we could do a quick call later today, we could explain a couple changes we've made in response, if that's helpful. Our window is 12:30 -2/3:30-5 or after 6/9. Otherwise, we'll "see" you on tomorrow morning's call. We can't, of course, go into that level of detail, though, but we can explain, conceptually, what we're doing.

Thanks again.

Jay,

I have a few minutes to write a longer note. As I mentioned on our call, text was posted as planned. Happy to have a quick call with you, and interested members, if necessary, although I can't really talk text with non-CAs as you know.

Probably mornings best for such a call. 7am is 10 your time. We're in negotiations full time otherwise.

The comment period closes on the 5th (I could have asked for the 4th, but I just couldn't:)).

Best,

Jared.

Jared –

Hope all is well. Couple of follow-up questions: 1. is the text up for cleared advisors – have yet to log on but wanted to check; 2. are you planning to daylight any of the text or general approach this week; 3. would you be willing to come in to brief our members (or we can come to you) to debrief so that they can get a sense of the general contours we discussed last week – I think it would be useful for them to hear that the tactical shift still captures what they expected out of the agreement.

Many thanks and look forward to talking soon.

Here is the article on SOPA and TPP

Some public interest groups accused U.S. and international negotiators of keeping discussion around the intellectual property -related Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) proposals closed to the public. Some of the U.S. proposals could have sweeping implications similar to what could happen if the Stop Online Piracy Act (SOPA) passes, said representatives from the Computer & Communications Industry Association, Electronic Frontier Foundation and other groups, that referred to leaked text of the proposals. The proposals could make it easier for IP protections to be enforced in a digital environment through intermediaries, said Sean Flynn, a law professor at American University in Washington. It "brings to the fore important public interests," he said during a webcast. SOPA showed that IP rules can have a significant impact on legitimate websites, said Jonathan Band, an IP attorney for CCAIA. "The remedies would allow, in essence, not the targeting of the content, but the targeting of the entire website." The IP rules can have a huge impact on international trade and have an impact that is extra-territorial, he said. Domain name system blocking laws could affect a foreign website even if the site is operating legally in another jurisdiction, he added. TPP shouldn't include the provisions that SOPA did, he said: "It shouldn't have that kind of blocking or remedies that affect entire sites for a relatively small amount of infringement." TPP should not authorize a website to be taken down "in its entirety without court adjudication," said Matt Zimmerman, a senior staff attorney at EFF. This "nuclear option" can be offensive to the principles of free expression, he said. While TPP doesn't include this option, its framework could be built around and influenced by it, he added. Under U.S. proposals, it's possible to be found liable for breaking technology protection measures "even where there is no underlying copyright infringement," said Krista Cox, an attorney for Knowledge Ecology International. They also call for higher damages to plaintiffs and concerning attorney fees than what is authorized in existing U.S. law, she said. - KL

(b)(3) (b)(5)

Norine Kennedy of USCIB is hosting an industry scoping meeting to discuss this matter on April 20th, and she would like to invite a USG representative.

to attend and speak to these issues. However, she is not sure who might be the right person to invite (someone from USTR, USPTO?). If it's not too troubling, I am wondering if you might be able to provide guidance on who would be the right person to reach out to on matters relating to transparency and IPRs at USTR or USPTO?

I would greatly appreciate any help you can provide.

With thanks!
